But the Bear Came Back

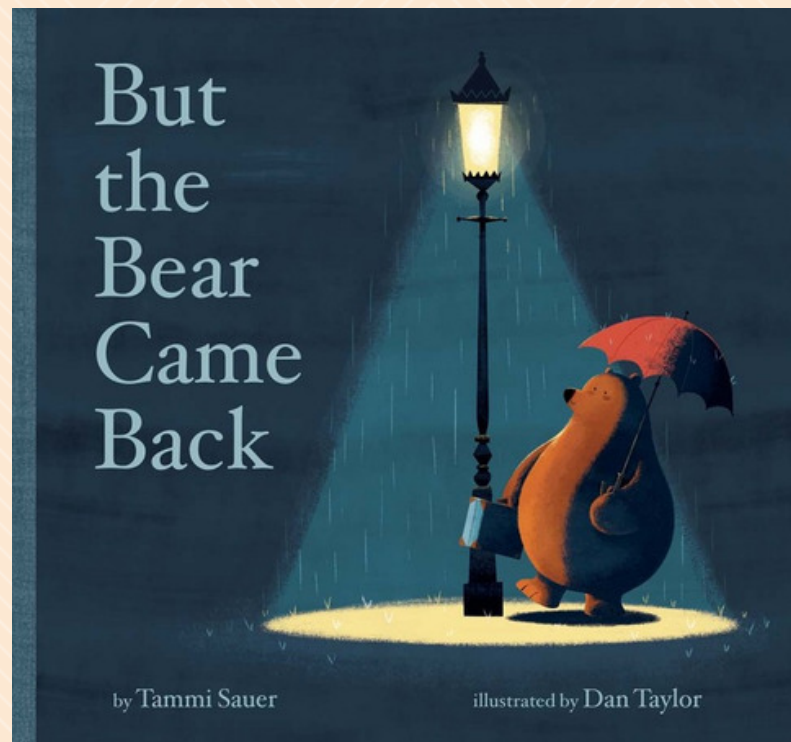

by Tammi Sauer

Illustrated by Dan Taylor

Knock, knock. Who's there? A BEAR! A furry, friendly, PERSISTENT bear. And no matter how many times a grouchy little boy tries to tell him that bears don't belong in houses, he keeps coming back.

But, one day, the bear doesn't return—and the boy realizes he wants to find his friend again.

A funny, surprising story

Frida Kahlo and her animalitos

by Monica Brown

Illustrated by John Parra

Based on the life of one of the world's most beloved artists, Frida Kahlo, and the animals that inspired her art and life. Brown's story recounts Frida's pets—two monkeys, a parrot, three dogs, two turkeys, an eagle, a black cat, and a fawn— and playfully considers how she embodied many wonderful characteristics of each animal.

Tales from a Tall Forest

by Shaun Micallef

Illustrated by Jonathan Bentley

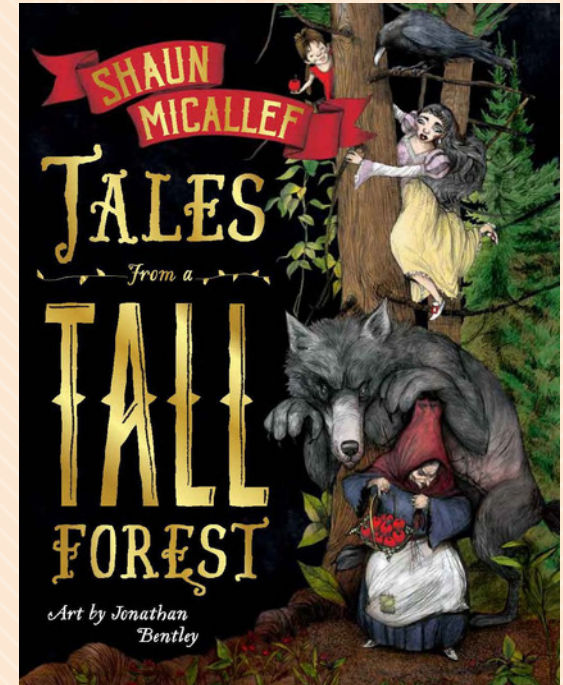

When an innocent princess wanders into the forest, she finds herself trapped between a ravenous wolf with an appetite and a sweet little house with a secret. Meanwhile, a desperate fisherman enters into a very bad bargain with a power-hungry monkey. And meanwhile still, a tiny tricky tailor promises a promise that not even the most magic of beanstalks can help him escape.

A deliciously clever and hilarious collection of mashed-up fairytales, with the mood of a Brothers Grimm tale, crossed with the sharp wit of The Princess Bride

The satirist Shaun Micallef unravels the traditional fairy story and nimbly weaves your favourite characters into new and surprising adventures.

Illustrated by award-winning artist Jonathan Bentley, this subversively silly trilogy will captivate parents and children alike – and indignant fairy tale authors too.

Shotaro

The Child Who Wanted to Be a Samurai

by Maria Giulia Cotini

Illustrated by Isabella Mazzanti

Shotaro is intelligent, stubborn and has been disabled since birth. Consequently, his dream of becoming a Samurai like his father appears impossible, indeed his father has decided that he should become a monk. However, his destiny changes course when Kenwa, a traitor warrior, arrives at the monastery. He is a man prepared to train anyone, even a little boy with deformed legs. But when the terrible soldiers sent by Lord Daimyo destroy the village and his dad disappears without a trace, hotaro's life is turned upside down and everything appears to be lost... But Shotaro manages to prove, with courage and determination, that a disability is no barrier to making a warrior out of a man.

An unforgettable adventure set in Ancient Japan written by a real black belt karate expert who battles against the challenges of her disability.

Maria Giulia Cotini born in 1980, has been disabled since birth: she is unable to walk, has problems with her hands, sight and hearing. From a young age she fell in love with martial arts, achieving a black belt in karate. She became the first disabled girl to train in a gym alongside able bodied fighters and to compete from a kneeling position. She completed a degree in the History of Religion achieving the highest possible grades. Shotaro is her debut title.

Mathematics Sucks!

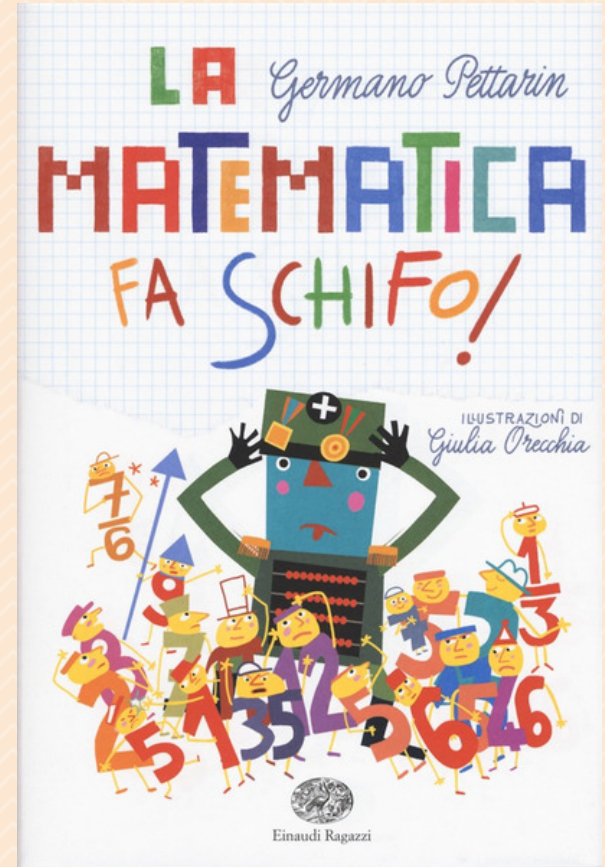

by Germano Pettarin

Illustrated by Giulia Orecchia

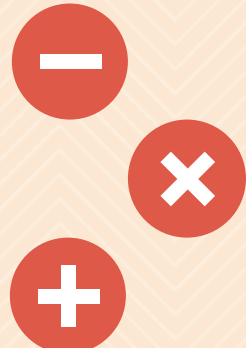

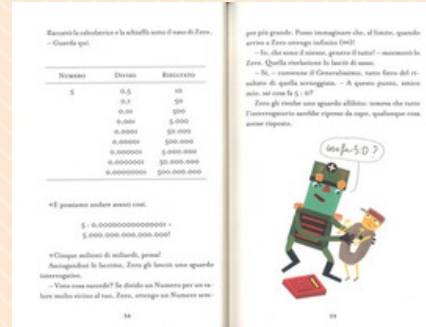

In the imaginary world of Cifralia, in order to settle the disorders created by the government of the King of Chaos, a new leader is proclaimed: the commander-in-chief Abacone, an unbending, precise personage who is fanatical about rules and order.

Despite himself, Abacone will discover that even in the world of numbers there are unexpected, surprising and intriguing results. A perfect story for demonstrating that mathematics is not an abstruse and arid subject that simply revolves round tedious calculations.

A perfect story to make readers loose the panic against mathematics!

The Traitor's Game

by Jennifer A. Nielsen

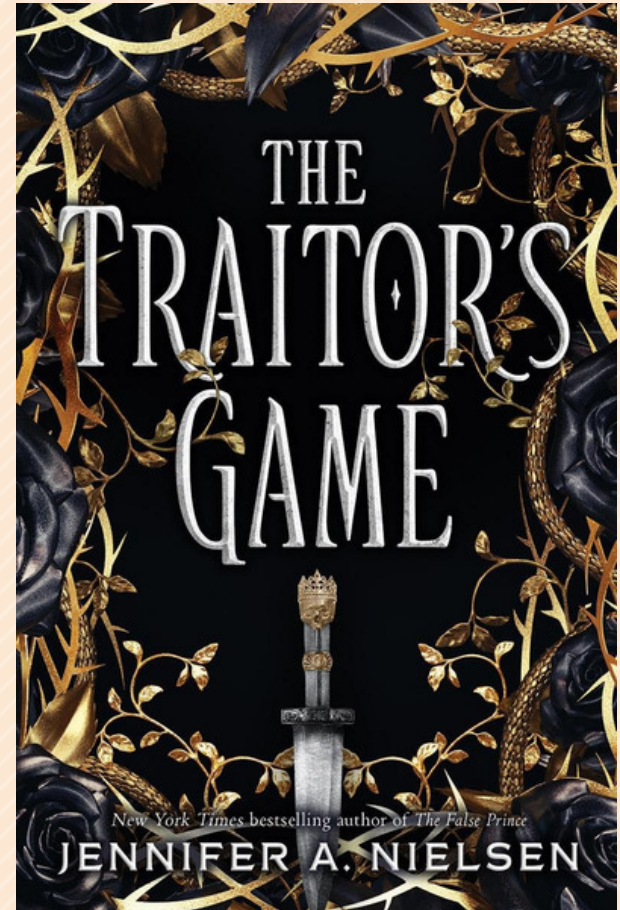

Kestra Dallisor has spent the past three years in exile, and is vexed to be drawn back into her father's palace politics. He's the right hand man of the cruel king, Lord Endrick, which makes Kestra a valuable bargaining chip. And a group of rebels knows this all too well: They snatch Kestra from her carriage as she reluctantly travels home. But Kestra is not the obedient captive they expected, and Simon, one of her kidnappers, will have his hands full as Kestra tries to foil their plot by force, cunning, or any means necessary. As motives shift and secrets emerge, both will have to decide what – and who – they're fighting for.
