Populistic parties are more and more gaining ground – not just in Germany. Politicians who promise simple solutions for difficult social and political problems attack established parties and gain supporters. Which influence do they have on our political system? Who are the voters and what are their intentions?

- current political and societal themes, conveyed clearly and concisely
- written by experienced journalists
- particularly suitable for implementation in schools (teaching material available!)

Extremist ideologies exist in various fields of our everyday life: in politics, religion also in society. How do you distinguish between someone who is an extremist and someone who holds an extreme opinion? Where does extremism come from and what kind of extremism does exist? Is there also a positive side to it?

Fairies 1: Cristalblau

Inordinately beautiful, bewitchingly elegant and absolutely stylish – these are the qualities 18-year-old Sophie can only dream of. Until she travels to celebrate her graduation to the exotic Lloret de Mar and meets the good-looking Taylor. He discovers a side of Sophie that she never has been able to recognise herself: Sophie is a Fairy and therefore is one of the most beautiful creatures in universe. Well, nearly, because before she transforms fully, the uncertain student has to visit the Fairy Academy to learn everything about being a Fairy. And that's quite a lot ...

The Pan-Trilogie: The Stolen Heart of the Otherworld (Sequel 2)

Allison can now reconcile herself with the existence of elves. But that she now has to prevent the death of an entire magical realm is harder to bear. But she is the key and therefore the only one who is able to close the Rain Gates, as soon as the heart of the Otherworld is in its rightful place again. What's more, Allison must first determine the state of her own heart. Because it's been shaken, and not just by the young man Finn.

Secret Elements 1: In the Shadows of the Sea

17-year-old Jessica lives according to her own rules and is considered to be rebellious and uncontrollable. She hides her flaming red hair and pale skin under black clothes and secretly works as a bartender at night. When a strange woman presents her with an antique amulet, she is fascinated by the precious gift but soon realises that she can't take it off again now she's put it on. All of a sudden she is thrown right in the middle of superhuman agents and magical destinies. On top of that, the arrogant Lee, of all people, is instructed to protect her. If only he weren't quite so good looking ...

The Uncanny Library

BERENICE

by Edgar Allan Poe,
illustrated by Lukas Jülicher

Poe's 'Berenice' is a story of unfulfilled love and the question of where things can lead when the unloved part of a person loses control over itself. In the end, the protagonist possesses a small box containing the pearly white teeth of his beloved, with no memory of what has lead him to this point.

TO THE SUCCESSORS IN NIGHTLIFE

by Sarah Khan,
illustrated by Isabel Kreitz

Sarah Khan writes horror stories set in contemporary Berlin. In this one, a party clique in the trendy 'Grill Royal' are wondering whether the night life in the 1980s was better than the current times. Without further ado, they bring the 'Beautiful Klaus' back to life, who draws the comparison.

THE STRANGER!

by Elfriede Jelinek,
illustrated by Nicolas Mahler

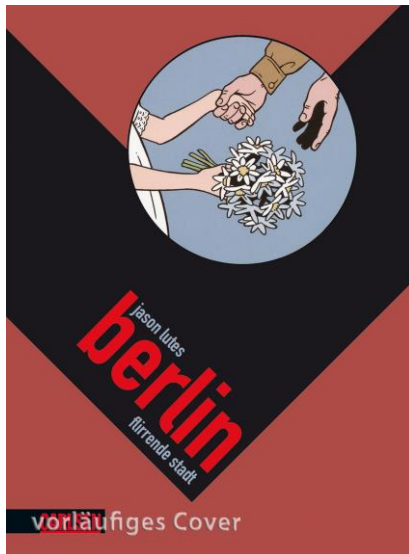

Not everyone thinks of vampires when it comes to Elfriede Jelinek. But the mysterious stranger in this story is, in fact, one. Nicolas Mahler is completely in his element here, delightfully illustrating the grumpy coffee-house zombie while referencing classic horror films with a light touch.

Isabel Kreitz is not only one of Germany's best comic illustrators but loves horror literature in all its facets and is an expert in the field.

'The Uncanny Library' is a new series which will bring together renowned comic illustrators and literary works from this genre.
