The first original series from the duo behind DC Comics:
Secret Hero Society and Li'l Gotham

Middle Grade

Text by Derek Fridolfs / Illustrated by Dustin Nguyen

Twins Atticus and Esmeralda Fetch are the best pet finders in Thorns Hollow -- a town where people have a lot of pets, and those pets often get lost. But when a lost dog leads them to an old, Victorian house on the edge of town, the twins find their world turned upside down. This creepy house contains a portal that leads to a whole other world -- a world where mythical creatures like trolls, fairies, and dragons are real. The secrets this mythical world contains are bigger than these kids could ever imagine. Secrets that could threaten to destroy the world as we know it. Now, Minerva, Atticus, and yes, their canine companion will have to work together if they want to save our world, and the world beyond the portal!

The Eisner Award-nominated and New York Times bestselling team of Derek Fridolfs and Dustin Nguyen creates a fantasy-based middle-grade series with a mix of typeset pages, illustrated artifacts, and beautiful comics.

Rolando from the Graveyard

by Fabio Genovesi

Rolando lives in a cemetery, along with his uncle, the guardian. All the school friends consider Rolando very odd and avoid him, so that he has just one friend named Cip, a blackbird he can communicate with.

One day the ghosts of two cousins, Marika and Mirko Gini, appear among the graves. Spiteful and dressed as sailors, they launch a challenge to Rolando: by midnight of the day after, the day of his tenth birthday, Rolando will have to climb Mount Puppet, enter the Black Darkness and find the Red Thing that is the only thing that can save them and will not make them disappear forever.

Thanks to this unexpected adventure Rolando will finally find the courage to face the world.

A fairytale atmosphere and a classic taste are combined with a fresh and original story.

Mondadori · Sept 2019 · 128 pages

Fabio Genovesi (born in Forte dei Marmi, Lucca, 1974) is an author much loved by the public and critics in Italy. He is the winner of the Strega Giovani Award in 2015 with Chi manda le onde.

Just a Word

Text by Matteo Corradini

Illustrations by Sonia Cucculelli

Middle Grade

Rizzoli · January 2019 · 204 pages

Roberto is a normal child, or that is what he has always believed. That is until his classmates start to make him notice that he is different because he wears glasses. Maybe it would be better if he changed school, and attended a school exclusively for children who wear glasses.

A simple but inhuman mechanism, so similar to that on which the persecution and extermination of the Jews was based, and so similar to many prejudices still alive in today's society.

Inspired by the true story of Roberto Bassi, a Jewish boy expelled from his primary school in 1938, Matteo Corradini writes a story that explains children the nature of the racial laws and the effect they had on Italy eighty years ago.

Matteo Corradini is a Jewish studies scholar and writer. He has worked in the educational field of Holocaust Remembrance for many years, and is on the board of the literary festival 'Scrittorincittà' (Writers in the city) in Cuneo. With Rizzoli he has published the successful book La repubblica delle farfalle, (The Butterfly Republic), set in the Terezin ghetto and also published in Germany. In 2018 he was awarded the Italian Andersen Prize.

Bank

by Emma Quigley

Little Island · March 2018 · 224 pages

Set in a rural Irish secondary school, this is the hilarious story of a bunch of pupils who have the genius idea of pooling their savings, setting up a bank and lending money to their schoolmates at extortionate interest rates. With sure-fire investments like a dating app and performing piglets, our lunch-break bankers are on a roll. But everything that booms must bust, sooner or later, and before long the whole thing starts to unravel.

Fast-paced and hilarious, this book – with its clever parallel to the Irish banking crisis – is worth its weight in gold.

- Appeal to boy readers – mainly male characters
- Witty, authentic dialogues
- Parallel story to the world banking crisis and economic collapse, but in a non-overt way
- Modern school story

A perfect life or a perfect lie?

A smart and edgy comedy about a woman who wakes up in an LA hospital with amnesia, a torn party dress, and a broken iPhone and must work backward, using her Instagram account, to piece together her identity, only to discover that her life is a perfect lie.

When Mia wakes up in a Long Beach hospital with a head wound, she knows everything there is to know about the Kardashian-Jenner family but almost nothing about herself. The only items in her possession are her torn party dress—which immediately begs the question, what kind of girl parties on a Tuesday night?—a tube of Chanel lipstick, and an iPhone with a shattered screen. She might not remember where she lives but she can use her Instagram account to work backward to piece together the basic facts of her identity. Easy enough, right?

The Find

by Bernhard Aichner

Why did Rita have to die? Who has the supermarket saleswoman on their conscience, the woman who never did any harm to anyone? Did the 53-year-old really sign her own death warrant when one day she took something home it would have been better to leave in the shop? The case is officially closed – but there is someone who refuses to give up: a policeman who is apparently obsessively asking questions – and won't accept Rita's death until the end.

The Raft of the Medusa

by Franzobel

Zsolnay · 2017 · 592 pages

Three barrels of wine, one barrel of water and a bag of rusks for 147 people on raft adrift in the ocean: Franzobel's impressive novel about the cost of survival. July 18, 1816, eleven o'clock in the morning: Off the West coast of Africa, the captain of the Argus spots a raft of about twenty metres in length. What he sees makes his blood run cold: hollow eyes, parched lips, hair stiff with salt, burned skin full of wounds and blisters ... The emaciated, naked figures are the last 15 of the original 147-man group who have survived two weeks at sea after the sinking of the frigate Medusa. Since there were too few seats in the lifeboats, these people were simply set adrift. A true story – one of the greatest disasters in seafaring history – forms the backdrop for Franzobel's epochal novel that hones in on the core of humanity. What significance do morality and civilisation take on in an extreme situation where survival is all that matters?

Our Father by Angela Lehner
Hanser · March 2019 · 268 pages

She is a mental patient beyond comparison – hilarious and highly manipulative. Here, in the psychiatric ward of an old Viennese hospital, was where the police brought Eva. And now she is telling chief psychiatrist Dr. Korb why it was inevitable. She tells him about her childhood in a staunchly Catholic village in southern Austria. Her father is the only one whom she does not speak of well: in fact, she wants to kill him. At least that is what she says. Because sometimes it's hard for the reader to tell the difference between the truth and her lies.

How We Became Human

by Madelaine Böhme

Spectacular finds throw a new light on the history of human evolution

The cradle of humanity is in Africa – for a long time this was the incontrovertible truth. In recent years, however, ever more bones have been found that chronologically and geographically do not fit into the picture: archaeologists have found numerous fossils in Europe of early ancestors of present-day apes from which later the human line of evolution emerged. The latest of those findings: the Danuvius guggenmosi, an ape with arms suited to hanging in trees but human-like legs.

Böhme and her team describe their paradigm-changing findings and bring to life the fascinating world of our earliest ancestors. A truly absorbing scientific crime story!

In the renowned Nature magazine, Madelaine Böhme and her team just published their research article on this new fossil ape and how it changes the previously applied models of the evolution of bipedalism. These approximately 11.6-million-year-old fossils suggest a form of locomotion that might push back the timeline for when walking on two feet evolved and extend the theory for a common ancestor of great apes and humans.

The Colours of the Square Numbers

by Rudolf Taschner

A brief guide to a fascination with maths

How can something be correct but at the same time untrue? Can an object with a limited volume have an infinitely large surface area? What does a card game reveal about the nature of time? And what do square numbers have to do with colours?

Rudolf Taschner takes us on a spectacular journey through the world of mathematics and philosophy, showing that answers to some of the biggest questions are hidden in numbers. We discover why Pythagoras already recognised the origins of the cosmos in numbers and why Nobel Prize winners still puzzle today over how maths is able to describe nature in such a miraculously accurate way.

The Colours of Square Numbers is a book full of amazing facts that invites even maths phobics to marvel at the beauty of numbers.

Why the heart is our most important sensory organ

by Dr. Reinhard Friedl

We seem to know everything about the heart – and yet we know nothing. In all the major human cultures the heart has been seen as the biological centre for love, sympathy, joy, courage, strength and wisdom. Why is this so? There are no sensors for measuring this, which is why neuroscientists today believe that emotions originate in the brain – but just like the intestines, the heart, too, is a small brain in the body that with a zillion neurones forms its own networks and not only receives but also sends signals.

In this truly absorbing book, heart surgeon Dr. Reinhard Friedl closely examines the latest findings of neuro- and psycho-cardiology that are revealing ever more secrets about the complex link between the heart, brain and psyche. He is convinced that the perception of the heart not only as a pump but also as a source of life leads to better health.

This is not Economy!

by Christian Felber

Deuticke · Sept 2019 · 304 pages

The initiator of the Economy for the Common Good now turns his attention to economics. How can the meteoric rise to fame of economics be explained? What do economics mean and are they justifiable as an independent scientific discipline? Controversial topics for the business world!

“Why did nobody notice it?” Not only Queen Elizabeth wondered aloud in 2008 why the financial crisis seemed to take economists by surprise. Economic faculties are buzzing with activity: students all over the world advocate a pluralist approach to economics. They want to reveal implicit assumptions, hidden value judgements and blind spots, and embed the economy in broader contexts again.

After reviewing the breadth of criticism, Felber poses fundamental questions about the roots of this discipline and where it started to go wrong. And he makes a concrete and consistent plea for holistic economic science. The curricula at universities and business schools can be changed immediately.

A Call for the Revolution of Economics

Courting The Wild Twin

by Martin Shaw

There is an old legend that says we each have a wild, curious twin that was thrown out the window the night we were born, taking much of our vitality with them. If there was something we were meant to do with our few, brief years on Earth, we can be sure that the wild twin is holding the key.

In Courting the Wild Twin, Dr. Martin Shaw invites us to seek out our wild twin—a metaphor for the part of ourselves that we generally shun or ignore to conform to societal norms—to invite them back into our consciousness, for they have something important to tell us. He challenges us to examine our broken relationship with the world, to think boldly, wildly, and in new ways about ourselves—as individuals and as a collective.

Through the use of scholarship, storytelling, and personal reflection, Shaw unpacks two ancient European fairy tales that concern the mysterious wild twin. By reading these tales and becoming storytellers ourselves, he suggests we can restore our agency and confront modern challenges with purpose, courage, and creativity

From What Is to What If

by Rob Hopkins

We do have the capability to effect dramatic change, Hopkins argues, but we're failing because we've largely allowed our most critical tool to languish: human imagination. As defined by social reformer John Dewey, imagination is the ability to look at things as if they could be otherwise. The ability, that is, to ask What if? And if there was ever a time when we needed that ability, it is now.

Imagination is central to empathy, to creating better lives, to envisioning and then enacting a positive future. Yet imagination is also demonstrably in decline at precisely the moment when we need it most.

Why imagination is in decline, and what we must do to revive and reclaim it? Once we do, there is no end to what we might accomplish. From What Is to What If is a call to action to reclaim and unleash our collective imagination, told through the stories of individuals and communities around the world who are doing it now, as we speak, and witnessing often rapid and dramatic change for the better.

The Wisdom of Old Dogs

by Elli H. Radinger

Ludwig · Oct 2018 · 320 pages

Dogs are magnificent creatures, regardless of their age. Living with an old dog and looking after it in its final years opens our eyes and our hearts. Old dogs can teach us a lot – accept every day as a gift; regret nothing; care for your pack; recognize what really counts; accept what cannot be changed; forgive while you are still alive; you are never too old for new tricks; age is a matter of attitude – and a whole lot more.

Elli H. Radinger, expert on wolves and dogs, tells compelling stories focussing on examples of trust, patience, mindfulness, gratefulness, intuition, love, forgiving and wit. They also contain examples of how to cope with grief and loss. A warm-hearted and amazing compliment for man's – and woman's – best friend.
