CATALOGUE 2020

What a year it's been for Sweet Cherry Publishing! Our books are being sold in more places than ever before, with new UK and international sales channels and a major US launch with Baker & Taylor Publisher Services. Our exciting list is growing and we've worked with family-favourite brands like Numberblocks, Shaun the Sheep and Geronimo Stilton. We've worked very hard this year, and we are proud to present our newest titles.

In middle-grade, we have a new star to shout about and her name is Mina Mistry! This young detective is Angie Lake's newest addition to our list and we hope you love her as much as we do.

This year sees the launch of three brand-new sets of adapted classics, and with it, the launch of our new Easy Classics range. The well-loved Sherlock Holmes stories, the most famous of Charles Dickens' novels, and the complete works of Jane Austen are adapted in these beautifully illustrated editions to bring the classics to a whole new generation.

We've taken on a creative approach to the formats of our books and published annuals, wipe-cleans, novelty and activity books. We're excited to showcase our Rainbow Hand Puppets that bring storytelling to life, and bring nostalgia to parents who watched the show!

From universally beloved characters to our own exciting stories, we're continuing to put the fun into reading and bring great stories within everyone's reach.

A black-grey wolf before it slunk into the shadows on his right. It reappeared from the left – no. This wolf was brown.

Gawain slowly drew his sword, and threaded his other arm through his shield. He was careful not to make any sudden movements.

Another growl drew his attention as a third wolf launched itself at Gringolet, its jaws snapping viciously at his forelegs. Gringolet reared up, kicking wildly. The animal fell to the ground with a thud.

From the corner of his eye, Gawain saw a blur. He brought his shield up just in time to deflect, but the wolf rallied quickly, and was joined by another targeting Gawain's opposite side.

Panicking now, Gringolet danced out of the path of the second wolf, just Lastly, they arrived at an overgrown graveyard. The spirit pointed to a gravestone.

'Before I draw nearer to that gravestone,' said Scrooge, 'answer me one question. Are the things you have shown me the shadows of what will happen? Or are they only the shadows of what may happen?'

Still, the ghost kept silent and pointed to the grave. Scrooge crept towards it, trembling as he went.
Following the direction of the finger, he read the name upon the stone of the neglected grave: Ebenezer Scrooge.

Mr Merryweather stopped to light a lantern and then led us down a dark, earth-smelling passage and, after opening a third door, into a huge vault. Gemma's not sure if she's brave enough to go to her music audition, or if she even wants to study music at all. She's definitely not sure forming a band with Lily's hot ex-boyfriend is a good idea.

Jamie's university life isn't like he thought it would be, and he doesn't know what to do about it. One thing he does know is that he wants a reason to bump into Gemma Anderson again.

Gemma

Ten days after I got the offer of an audition, I open the web pages of all the university courses I've applied to. I'm hoping that if I consider them quietly, in turn, I'll be able to decide which ones I really want to do. And I'm not going to base my decisions on which ones require an audition. Nope. Definitely not.

It is literally life-changing, deciding-the-course-of-my-future stuff, but half an hour in I am no further forward. In fact, I've migrated to social media, which could count as research since Jamie Abernethy is actually at university. And 'research' sounds so much better than 'stalking'.

It's a positive case study. Jamie's doing really well. Of course. Socialising like mad. Refereeing. People tag him in pictures all the time, in nightclubs or on football pitches. He's let his hair grow a bit and it suits him.

If I could be like anyone, I think I'd want to be like Jamie. He wouldn't be panicking about auditions. He doesn't stress about disappointing people – not that he ever could. He makes everything seem effortless. It must be nice to be like that.

As I scroll through, I just happen to notice that he's coming back to Newton St Cuthbert this weekend. That makes me sit up. Not that it's anything to do with me. It's just that Mrs Marshall has asked me to go in for an extra lesson too – "summoned" is the word Jamie uses.

Maybe I should take up that Saturday slot she's been going on about. Mrs Marshall says it'll be good preparation for the Conservatoire audition. I still haven't told her that I probably won't be going to it. I haven't told anyone.

On Saturday morning it starts snowing. In the first week of November!

I hate snow. It's cold and wet and inconvenient and – okay it's quite pretty, but otherwise I hate it. It's dangerous. There'll be cars sliding off the road and old people falling and breaking their hips. People should just stay indoors on days like this. Instead, I'm heading to Mrs Marshall's.

We could have cancelled. I'm sure someone sensible like Jamie will have cancelled. But Mum said we couldn't because it would be rude and the weather's not that bad. I insist we leave early, so at least we have plenty of time for me to drive very veeery slowly out of town, towards the village where Mrs Marshall

ANNE'S HISTORY

"Do you know," said Anne confidentially, "I've made up my mind to enjoy this drive. It's been my experience that you can nearly always enjoy things if you make up your mind firmly that you will. Of course, you must make it up firmly. I am not going to think about going back to the asylum while we're having our drive. I'm just going to think about the drive. Oh, look, there's one little early wild rose out! Isn't it lovely? Don't you think it must be glad to be a rose? Wouldn't it be nice if roses could talk? I'm sure they could tell us such lovely things. And isn't pink the most bewitching color in the world? I love it, but I can't wear it. Red-headed people can't wear pink, not even in imagination. Did you ever know of anybody whose hair was red when she was young, but got to be another color when she grew up?"

"No, I don't know as I ever did," said Marilla mercilessly, "and I shouldn't think it likely to happen in your case either."

Anne sighed.

"Well, that is another hope gone. 'My life is a perfect graveyard of buried hopes.' That's a sentence I read in a book once, and I say it over to comfort myself whenever I'm disappointed in anything."

"I don't see where the comforting comes in myself," said Marilla.

"Why, because it sounds so nice and romantic, just as if I were a heroine in a book, you know. I am so fond of romantic things, and a graveyard full of buried hopes is about as romantic a thing as one can imagine isn't it? I'm rather glad I have one. Are we going across the Lake of Shining Waters today?"

"We're not going over Barry's pond, if that's what you mean by your Lake of Shining Waters. We're going by the shore road."

"Shore road sounds nice," said Anne dreamily. "Is it as nice as it sounds? Just when you said 'shore road' I saw it in a picture in my mind, as quick as that! And White Sands is a pretty name, too; but I don't like it as well as Avonlea. Avonlea is a lovely name. It just sounds like music. How far is it to White Sands?"

"It's five miles; and as you're evidently bent on talking you might as well talk to some purpose by telling me what you know about yourself."

"Oh, what I know about myself isn't really worth telling," said Anne eagerly. "If you'll only let me tell you what I imagine about myself you'll think it ever so much more interesting."

"No, I don't want any of your imaginings. Just you stick to bald facts. Begin at the beginning. Where were you born and how old are you?"

A VOYAGE ON THE AMAZON RIVER

Soon we were on our way. We sailed up the Amazon River. What an UNBELIEVABLE sight! The plants were lush and incredibly green. Multicoloured birds sat on the branches of the trees. Crocodiles floated like killer logs in the water. ENORMOUSE hairy spiders, carnivorous ants and poisonous snakes watched us from the shore. I shivered. I was glad I was on the sub. Don't get me wrong, I like wildlife as much as the next rodent. But this wildlife was a little too wild, if you know what I mean.

I chewed my whiskers to keep from shrieking with fear. I didn't want anyone to call me a scaredy-mouse. I forced myself to listen to the professor. He was giving Benjamin a history lesson.

"The first European rodent to land in the Americas was CHRISTOPHER COLUMOUSE in 1492. But he thought he had reached India. That's why he called the local people Indians. After Columouse, the conquistadors arrived from Spain. They were soldiers who conquered land in the name of the king of Spain.

"Next, adventurers from Portugal came. They colonised Brazil," he explained.

'Hah, well done! Good girl, Zoe.'
Perseus was watching from the shade of a flowering tree. The old man smiled at the children before starting to squawk, 'Hey, don't step in those flower beds.'

NO - BE CAREFUL!

Perseus hobbled around, scowling at the liberated gorgon victims. He shook his walking stick at them as they capered about. Some were dancing. Others were doing backflips and cartwheels. One of the gorgon's victims had been frozen while holding a stringed instrument that looked like a cross between a guitar and a harp. He started to play and everyone whooped with pleasure.
