Marisa MERMAID

Da entdeckte Marisa, was Nero meinte: Auf den leuchtend grünen Seegraskolmen klebten, so weit das Auge reichte, winzig kleine fünfzackige Sterne.

„Seesternenbrötchen“, hauchte Marisa entzückt: Vor lauter Meeremädchen Glück umarmte sie ihren Delfin Freund.

„Sind die nicht süß?“, quetschte Nero. Marisa nahm einen der kleinsten Seesterne behutsam auf ihre Fingerspitze. „Du bist wohl gerade erst geschlappt, Meiner Seesterne. Schade, dass Coralia da“

„Ja, so schön schnarrte sie gleich ab. Da der versöhnt“

„Stoppl“, rief Marisa plötzlich und ließ sich von Neros Rücken gleiten. Das Meeremädchen hatte etwas entdeckt:

Es hob eine wunderschöne Muschel auf und hielt sie sich ans Ohr.

„So wie das Rauschen in dieser Muschel hört sich das Meer von der anderen Seite aus an“, flüsterte sie verwundert. Sie musste sofort wieder an die schöne Zeit mit Azora denken und lächelte vor sich hin.

„Traumen kannst du in deiner Kajüte, kleines Meeremädchen. Jetzt aber ab ins Haus“, schnarrte Nero. „Wenn wir noch länger fort bleiben, hast du morgen womöglich noch Kopfschmerzen und es wird nichts aus deinem schönen Ponyabenteuer.“

Schnell wie der Wind, der über das Meer rauschte, schoss Nero mit Marisa auf dem Rücken zurück zur Enevalda.

LOVE IT!

AS AN AUTHOR, KATHARINA HARTWELL STARTS DEBATES:
"For me, FANTASY means bringing up socio-critical topics: Power and Society, Instruments of Repression, Isolations. It's all about Politics. Think about 'The Hunger Games'."

LITERALLY
WELL-REVIEWED!

« This story has many beginnings.

It starts with a map that doesn't stand still,
with a ship that doesn't touch the sea and with an armour out of silver shed.

It starts with two dolls out of wood, a night-black feather and a bird in the bones.

It starts with two witches and a man without any colour.

It starts with a lie.

It starts in the grey, the blue, the silver and the tarblack sea.

It starts with the Cold Weeks, with the fishers who don't trust the sea and the lost children of Colm.

First of all, it starts with a girl. »

A future without us:
A well-designed virtual chamber play
– no sets, no material, no human.

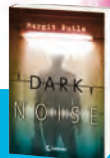

Human beings are imperfect, but machines never make mistakes. After his mother's death, 17-year old Vincent is rated at the lowest level in the social system. That's why he can't go to university and study. And Vincent's father lost their house. Instead of studying, Vincent illegally repairs mechanic animals. When an old Lady brings her broken cat to be fixed by him, Vincent receives a hint to a so-called 'simulation'. An exact digital copy of our world, virtual twins of our gadgets and machines are linked: in the 'Internet of Things'. Even mechanic pets are all around there, but no humans. Because following the logic of simulations, humans are non-conforming. Thus, we actually are redundant...

And if that's no longer enough, more complex works of art, such as a school of fish swimming through the ocean or a hot air balloon flying over a meadow of flowers, are created in no time at all!
