So small you might not even see me... But often everything that is small, can be very big too"

"Tiny" is an album that visually plays with the opposites big/small to challenge and connect with one of the most intense feelings of children: What is it to be big?

Anna Font delves into her childhood memories and intuitively experiments with her art until she reaches beautiful scenes that show an immensity of small details in life. Moments, sensations and smells that connect with the little ones and reveal to them how big they can be.

Anna Font is a renowned illustrator, living and working in Barcelona. She illustrates picture books and books for children and has been awarded prestigious prizes such as The Critics Award Serra d'Or 2020 and the II Picturebook Award Vila de Térmens.

The Truce

Text and illustrations by Toni Galmés

La Galera, fall 2022, 64 pages.

The Truce tells a real story of peace: one that happened at the front during the First World War, on Christmas eve of 1915. The war stopped for some hours and the English and German soldiers played a football match.

"The Truce is the first album written and drawn by one of the best-known illustrators in our country, a book that comes in a year in which, unfortunately, there has been war but also football, and which is a hymn to hope and peace."

Sebastià Bennasar, VilaWeb

Toni Galmés (Manacor, Mallorca 1983) is one of the best known illustrators in Spain today. His illustrations draw from many sources: from cinema and comics, but also from 19th and 20th century illustration. Currently he is working on the comic Molly & Carson and giving shape to the next project he has in mind.

A very inspiring story, quite impossible but true, that makes us think that above all, humanity is the main thing.

Fish

Text by Emilio Urberuaga Illustrations by Javier Zabala

Bululú, 2022, 32 pages

Two National Illustration Award winners united for the first time

sample translation available

Emilio Urberuaga and Javier Zabala have created a surprising picture book that is an authentic work of art.

FISH is a nonconformist, and neither the sea, nor the land, nor the sky are enough to drown its desire to explore and walk beaches and streets in an ironic hymn to freedom, creativity and the personal development of a crazy coelacanth that lives without the shackles of 'political correctness'.

"A plot as surreal as it is fun, with a critical undertone. The graphic concepts are brimming with originality and combine different techniques to wrap up the guiding thread. This particular coelacanth will captivate readers of all ages."

Canal Lector

Emilio Urberuaga (Madrid, 1954) and Javier Zabala (León, 1962) have both been awarded the Spanish National Prize for Illustration, work nationally and internationally with renowned publishers and the children's books they have illustrated or written have been translated into numerous languages.

"J.J. works in an office in a city and lives a monotonous and routined life, until one morning, he discover a crocodile under his bed that eats up his shoes. Confused, he goes to tell the butcher about it, who attributes his discovery-vision to working too much. It would also not hurt to get to know somebody...

Listening to the butcher, J.J. becomes aware of his situation and realises that he can't go around proclaiming that a crocodile lives under his bed.

"Admitting to a crocodile in your life is not easy. That is to say, there are many small and large changes one is forced to face." That is indeed quite true, but above all J.J. wants to find a solution to his problem. He goes to see a doctor who, without flinching, listens to his ailment and prescribes the pertinent medicine: Cocodrifil tablets, suppositories Cocodritalidon and effervescent cocodritamine.

With direct language and drops of humor, the author narrates the vital anguish of a man to whom something happens that he simply cannot explain. The crocodile could be the distress that accompanies it, the loneliness, the depression and the lack of dreams. The change that occurs in the protagonist at the end, is no other than the acceptance of the crocodile, his crocodile. Because, just like Elena, the spontaneous young trainee from his office, tells him: "At this point, I would talk to him. That'd be the best. Either you make friends or he eats you."

The result is, which is what happens with good children's texts, that this story admits and holds a wonderful second reading for adults.

Hi. My name is Duna and this is my summer diary.

I'm here with my two sisters in our grumpy grandfather's house. Mum left us in this white and blue village facing the sea and my teacher has set as homework to write about everything that happens to me before I begin high school. I can't deny it, it looked like it was going to be the most boring summer of my life.

But now, between the daredevil gang, my grandfather's secrets, and a super interesting boy I met in the forest, it seems that things are livening up. All indications are that this is going to be a special summer – a summer of discoveries, the kind that make you grow up.

A boarding school, literature as a compass and a surprising love story.

Following her parents' divorce, Irene is sent to a cliffside boarding school in the south of England. There she will experience her first disappointment in love with great pain, while at the same time gaining an unexpected mentor: Peter Hugues, the strictest teacher in the school, offers to teach her the "grammar of love" through seven great novels of the genre, from Goethe and Jane Austen to García Márquez and Murakami. Irene will gradually fall in love with her teacher, while another mysterious suitor secretly aspires to her heart.

"(Carmona) leaves the reader with a good series of reflections and advice. In addition, her books are full of information about writers, films, songs and works of art, so when we finish them we feel a double satisfaction:

having enjoyed a good novel and having learned."

"The grammar of love invites us to (re)discover great novels of universal literature, as well as trying to understand the mechanisms of the heart and feelings."

Rocío Carmona (Barcelona, 1974) is a writer, editor and columnist. Besides The Grammar of Love, some of her best-known novels are Hannah's Heart, Robinson Girl (Jaén Prize for Young People's Literature in 2013) and What happened when you broke my heart.
