Professor Dr. med. Martin Middeke

Professor Dr. med. Martin Middeke studied human medicine at the Ludwig Maximilian University of Munich. He spent decades researching the regulation of blood pressure and arterial hypertension. Middeke is the author of numerous text books and patient guides and developed a Health App.

The Age Formula

How blood flow keeps us healthy

New findings on the relationship between age, sex, body size, vascular function and mortality confirm that the key to a long and healthy life are healthy vessels. These are the words of Professor Martin Middeke, who has dedicated his medical career to research into blood pressure and its regulation. He explains how important the interaction of heart rate, breath and blood pressure is for an optimal supply of oxygen and nutrients to all organs. The book provides numerous practical and proven ways in which we can minimise the risk factors for cardiovascular disease.

Germinal Hilbert

Germinal Hilbert studied law in Würzburg and Munich and wrote his doctoral thesis on the subject of Franco-German comparative law. Hilbert later worked at the Insead Business Institute Fontainebleau and founded his artist agencies in Paris and Munich.

On intimate terms with Carmen, Mimi and Don Giovanni

My life with the greatest voices of opera

Germinal Hilbert has been an international agent for the great opera singers for over 50 years, looking after them worldwide with his agencies in Paris and Munich. In this book, Hilbert talks about his job, the ups and downs of a singer's life and the changes on the opera stage. His book is a musical autobiography with stars from the world's stages and deep insights behind the scenes.

It also attempts to find answers to the eternal question: should music have priority or should the lyrics come first? And: are directors getting out of hand?

The author of the great opera stars like Birgit Nilsson, Edda Moser and Edita Gruberova

Sira Huwiler-Flamm

Sira Huwiler-Flamm, born in 1987, works as a freelance journalist in Germany and Switzerland. In addition to food and drink, her main topics include society, psychology, medicine, travel and the start-up scene.

Behind the Plate

Why food makes us human

We all eat – sometimes with pleasure, sometimes with guilt, sometimes with friends or family, sometimes all alone. We cook our first own porcini risotto with pride, still enjoy our grandma's pancakes at 40, and try the most diverse tastes of the world with amazement. Sira Huwiler-Flamm has spoken with many top chefs and shows that the way we prepare our food is what makes us human. Eating together shapes our relationships, determines our sense of belonging, nourishes our soul and keeps our body healthy. In short, eating is something very special that deserves much more attention and respect!

Katrin Glatz Brubakk

Katrin Glatz Brubakk is a German-Norwegian child psychologist specialising in trauma and one of the most prominent advocates for the rights of refugees.

Diary from Gaza

A child psychologist's report on loss, trauma and hope

Katrin Glatz Brubakk worked for a month in autumn 2024 as a child psychologist at the Nasser Hospital in Khan Younis in the south of the Gaza Strip. Her diary from that time shows the psychological impact of war on people, especially children. What unimaginable stress do they live under? What existential worries do they have? What illnesses and consequences will they carry with them for the rest of their lives? Katrin Glatz Brubakk also shows how much people want to help each other – especially in maintaining hope.

“I heard the sound of war. Not in the form of bomb explosions, but as the painful cries of traumatised children. Cries so piercing that they embody all the pain of Gaza.”

“No one talks about how destroyed we are.”

Ulf Poschardt

Ulf Poschardt (born 1967) is a leading German journalist, former editor-in-chief of the Sueddeutsche Magazin and Vanity Fair, and since 2025 publisher of the POLITICO Group.

Shit Citizenry

In this sharp and provocative essay, Ulf Poschardt exposes a new social character that is shaping and paralysing our society: the “shit citizen”. With an ominous mixture of arrogance and subservience, the shit citizen presents himself as the morally superior saviour of the world – but in doing so, he primarily defends his own privileges and interests. Poschardt, one of Germany's most renowned journalists, shows how the shit citizen has established an unprecedented “hegemony” in the liberal, saturated societies of the West. This has not only permeated institutions such as culture, media and into a deep crisis. An essential read for anyone who wants to understand the social change of our time.

Dominik von Ribbentrop

Dominik von Ribbentrop studied at the University of Buckingham, where his fellow students included Winston Churchill's great-grandson. From 1995, he worked for Salomon Brothers, the investment bank, among other places. After that, he founded and built up two companies.

Understanding, but no comprehension

Notes of a grandchild

Joachim von Ribbentrop was Adolf Hitler's foreign policy advisor and was sentenced to death in the Nuremberg trials against the major war criminals in October 1946. The social decline at the end of Weimar and the unleashing of the Second World War seem far away and part of the past. But they are not. Exactly the same dynamics are present and powerful again today. Almost 80 years later, the grandson Dominik von Ribbentrop travels through German and European history and psyche to analyse the patterns behind the processes and to point out constants. His book is an important contribution to ensuring that the Germans do not crash and burn again the country, which today is once more filled with ideology rather than pragmatism.

Teseo La Marca is a freelance reporter and writes for various media like taz and Neue Zürcher Zeitung. Numerous research journeys have taken him to the Islamic world, especially to Iran and the persian-speaking area.

The misguided Islam debate and its consequences

A reality check

The German view of Islam is characterised by trivialisation at least as much as by prejudice. On his journey to Muslim communities, journalist Teseo La Marca puts the German Islam debate to a reality test. In conversation with Muslims, left-wing apologists and critics of Islam, it becomes evident how Islamists are using the polarised debate to advance their own agenda under the radar of public attention. The only thing that will help against this is a more open, more unsparing discussion. We should not be asking whether Islam belongs to Germany, but rather: which Islam?

Martin Gehlen

Martin Gehlen worked as a Middle East correspondent for various German-language media such as FR, Tagesspiegel and Die Zeit until his death in 2021. He reported from Cairo for many years and later from Tunis.

Once upon a time there was a Garden of Eden

Reports from the Middle East. From the archive of Martin Gehlen

This book brings together selected reportages by Middle East correspondent Dr Martin Gehlen, who passed away in 2021, and photo documentaries by his wife, photographer Katharina Eglau. Martin Gehlen's reportages and stories always maintained a love of people and an open mind towards the diversity of cultures. Gehlen was willing to look behind the scenes, using data, facts and reasoned points of view, to discover not only the drama but also the diversity and beauty of the foreign. In view of the current conflicts and ongoing wars between Middle Eastern states, this book aims to counteract the polarisation in society.

Rainer Mausfeld

Rainer Mausfeld is a professor at the University of Kiel and was head of the Department of Perception and Cognition Research until his retirement. His most recent book, published by Westend Verlag, is Hybris und Nemesis (2023).

Social disruptions

Are we on the way to a world order of force?

Western society has been in a state of deep crisis for a long time and is now seeking to defend its claim to hegemony with growing aggression, internally and externally. The values it professes are increasingly being recognised as hypocrisy. This applies particularly to the civilisational guiding principles of an egalitarian democracy and an egalitarian international law. Robbed of their original meaning, they have lost their power to secure peace. Rainer Mausfeld reveals historical parallels behind the serious civilisational fractures of the present day. At the centre of this is the ideology of Western exceptionalism, which has served Western power elites for centuries to conceal their global claim to power behind the mask of a fight for 'civilisational values'.

Marc Trachtenberg Marcus Klöckner

Marcus Klöckner is an author and journalist who has written numerous articles on the war in Ukraine.

Marc Trachtenberg is an American historian and political scientist. His best-known books include “A Constructed Peace” about the post-war order in Europe.

Chronicles of a War foretold

Ukraine and the failure of diplomacy

“War against war” – that was the title of one of the poems by satirist Kurt Tucholsky. Unfortunately, Western policy towards Ukraine in recent years has been uninspired by this guiding principle. First, the Federal Republic of Germany delivered 5,000 helmets to Ukraine. Then came weapons, tanks and missiles: that was the “solution” that was pursued. Numerous quotes and news reports from the past three years, compiled in this book, create a document that shows how a policy of confrontation leads to the total failure of diplomacy. This “chronicles of a war foretold” show us why the Ukraine policy has failed – if peace was its the goal. With an illuminating essay by US historian Marc Trachtenberg on the background to NATO's eastward expansion.

The book shows how war preparations escalated over the last three years.

The Power of Human Perceptions

Why we talk past each other and good politics fail

You have probably watched a talk show or political magazine programme where politicians from different parties or movements were invited. And you probably noticed at least two things: First, it is alarmingly easy to predict what opinions and arguments the respective politicians will put forward on a topic. Second, discussion rounds in the media contribute, at best, to gathering the available opinions, but never to any kind of rapprochement or consensus. Bestselling author Bernhard Hommel explains why this is so in his new book and shows how we can understand each other better again.

„From the River to the Sea“

Surviving between the Jordan and the Mediterranean

Israel/Palestine is the symbolic high-voltage line: anyone who touches it will be crushed. The conflict is discussed under high tension – but often without a common factual basis for a conversation. But how could the conflict in Israel/Palestine take on such deadly proportions in the first place? This book focuses on the ethnic cleansing and economic crimes that have characterised the Middle East for the last centuries. It looks at the role of colonial powers in creating this conflict and attempts to build a bridge between the seemingly irreconcilable camps.

Final questions What dying people want to know

At the end of a life, the unimportant things fade into the background and the big and fundamental questions arise. But what are the questions that emerge as central in the last hours of life? And how can they be dealt with? In his day-to-day work, pastor and Frankfurt hospital chaplain Matthias Struth encounters many people at the end of their lives who are thinking about the afterlife or dealing with their faith. Some people's faith is put to a tough test, others are only just emerging. Struth tells these stories with great ease and confidence, without taking away their seriousness.

War games How NATO and the Pentagon simulate the destruction of Europe

Since the end of WW2, the US, Great Britain and Russia as well as NATO have simulated possible atomic confrontations between each other. Still, there is hardly a public discourse about the devastation of such a confrontation – although most of those simulations anticipate the complete destruction of Germany and other European countries.

Turning Times The mental state of the present

Polarized society and divided opinions. Right is left and vice versa, conservative no longer exists, liberal has newly morphed into libertarian. Security is more important than freedom, peace is no longer of consequence and climate change bears all the responsibility. Fake rules over everything, all truth is lost without a trace and those who speak of it, have already lost. Ulrike Guérot illustrates in 10 short essays in what kind of intellectually demented world we have entered and how political thinking has been changed and twisted. Welcome to the 21st century!

Ulrike Guérot studied Political Science, History and Philosophy in Bonn, Münster and Paris. She is a professor and author in the fields of Europe and Democracy. Contributing her knowledge to various think tanks as well as at universities in Paris, Brussels, London, Washington, Berlin, and Vienna.
