TAIL NOT INCLUDED

Michael Debenham

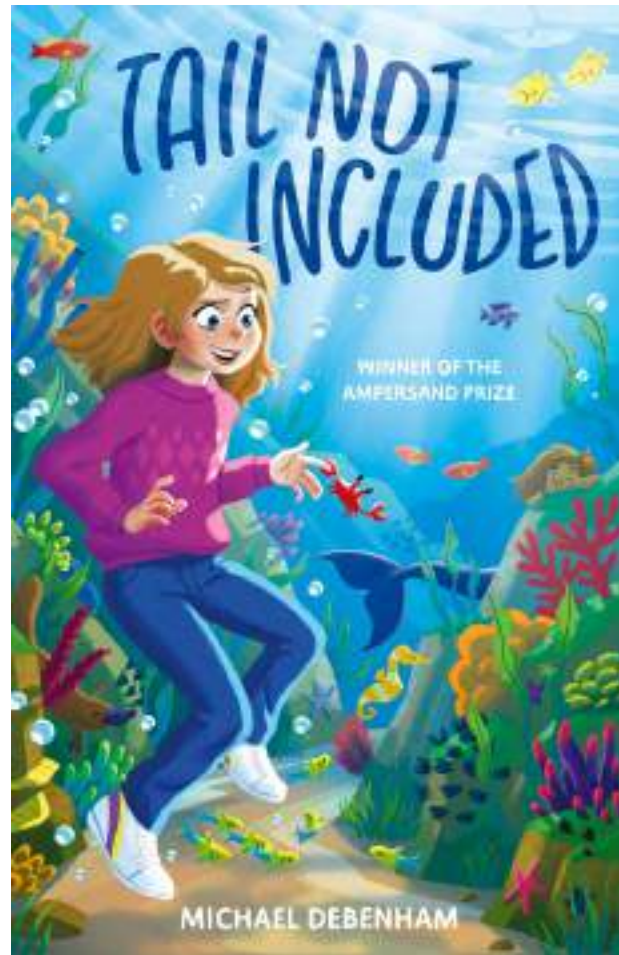

A hilariously offbeat, merfolk adventure about a girl who finally meets her absent father – only to discover that he's not exactly human.

Aside from her school burning down (twice!), Becky's life is fairly predictable – and that's just how she likes it. So when her dad turns up out of the blue, she's not interested in meeting him. After all, he's a total stranger. And kind of strange. But Becky can't help wondering: what's the Ceremony of the Waves he insists on taking her to? Why did he leave her and her mum? Why is he so keen to get into the ocean? And ... why does he smell like fish?

Brimming with merfolk, surprising sea creatures and villainous platypuses, this Ampersand Prize-winning debut novel cleverly weaves in themes of friendship, masculinity and family ties.

Tim Flannery

Professor Tim Flannery is one of the world's leading scientists, explorers and conservationists. He's spent most of his life studying the natural world – from mammalogy to palaeontology – and has had some incredible adventures along the way, including floating down crocodile-infested rivers and wrestling pythons. He's discovered 75 new species of animals – some that are still living, and others that have been preserved as fossils. In 2007, he was named Australian of the Year. He has published over 140 peer-reviewed scientific papers and more than thirty books.

Emma Flannery is a scientist and writer whose curiosity for the natural world has seen her travel and work in some of its most wild and interesting places. She has explored caves, forests and oceans across most of the globe's continents in search of the elusive fossils, animals and plants that help us understand our planet and who we are in it. Emma's research and writing has been published in scientific journals, children's books and a number of museum-based adult education tours.
